

Facilities & Technology Support

John Marshall is making bold plans for the future. The Board of Trustees is deeply involved in developing a new master plan for expansion and improvement of our facilities. Some projects are already underway with the completion of the Justice Arthur Goldberg Memorial Courtroom and the planned renovation of the State Street Building. More details will be forthcoming shortly. The John Marshall Law School's profile will be elevated and a thrilling new chapter in our history will begin.

Student Support

The John Marshall Law School has selected Rufus Van Barner and Tiffany Onyemaobi as the first recipients of the Donald Hubert Memorial Scholarship for Legal Diversity.

“The Donald Hubert Scholarship provides me with the financial freedom to concentrate on my academics, and ultimately, affords me a chance to “pay it forward.” My dream is to go back into the Englewood area and help those children blighted by severe economic distress.”

Tiffany Onyemaobi is a first-year student at The John Marshall Law School. She attended Gwendolyn Brooks College Preparatory Academy on the city’s South Side, and graduated from Washington University in St. Louis, Missouri, with a BA in international and area studies, in 2009.

“I am excited to be awarded the Don Hubert Scholarship, because it allows me to focus on studying. Being able to focus on my coursework makes my goals more attainable and allows me to be more competitive for Law Review and Moot Court. It allows me to be a better student.”

Rufus Barner is a first-year student at The John Marshall Law School. He graduated from the University of Chicago with a BA in sociology, in 2008. Before becoming a student at John Marshall, he was a legal assistant and case manager for the Lawyers’ Committee for Better Housing in Chicago.

“Armed with a unique education from The John Marshall Law School, I soon felt comfortable representing clients on my own terms and getting first-chair experience at trial and appellate courts.

The financial aid offered to me as a scholarship recipient, was not only very generous, it also provided a unique opportunity. Graduating without student loans allowed me to take on an exciting business venture which otherwise might not have been possible.”

Keith Scala graduated cum laude from The John Marshall Law School, in 2000. He served on The John Marshall Law Review and twice represented John Marshall at the Giles Sutherland Rich Memorial Moot Court Competition. Today he is a partner at the Washington, DC, law firm Myers Bradford PLLC.

“I came to John Marshall with a pure science background, and English was my second language. John Marshall’s practical approach to specialty training and its emphasis on writing made my career possible. The people I met at John Marshall are still enriching my professional life today.”

Di Jiang (JD ’99) received her PhD in biochemistry and her post-doctoral training at Harvard Medical School and the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute. She clerked for Hon. Paul Michel, U.S. Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit, in 2002, and practiced intellectual property law with law firms in New York City and Boston. Today, Jiang is assistant general counsel of the Intellectual Property Office at Sepracor, Inc., in Marlborough, Massachusetts.

Faculty Support

“The legal education I received at John Marshall provided the tools necessary to thrive in private practice. Its professors taught the legal and practical skills which are pivotal to a lawyer’s success. Because of my experience at John Marshall, I obtained the exact job I wanted, where I became a partner after only a few years.”

Terri Lea (Martin) Fildes graduated cum laude from The John Marshall Law School, in 1999, where she was lead articles editor of The John Marshall Law Review. She is a partner at the Rock Island law firm of Pappas Hubbard O’Connor Fildes Secaras, P.C.
