

THE JOHN MARSHALL LAW SCHOOL

Reservation of Rights

The John Marshall Law School reserves the right to 1) modify the requirements for admission or graduation, 2) change the tuition fees, 3) change the assignment of teachers, arrangement of courses or materials used at any time, 4) change the calendar year, 5) refuse admission or readmission to any student at any time, 6) dismiss any student at any time for either academic or disciplinary reasons, or 7) modify, add to, or delete any other provision within the law school policies at any time.

Notice: Pursuant to the “Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act of 1974,” 20 U.S.C 1232g, The John Marshall Law School may disclose the following “directory information” about a student to any person without prior notice to or consent from the student: his or her name, address, telephone listing, date and place of birth, major field of study, photograph, participation in officially recognized activities, dates of attendance, degrees, and awards received, and the most recent previous educational agency or institution attended by the student. Any student who does not want any directory information about himself or herself released without his or her prior consent shall so indicate in a signed letter to the Academic Services Office. A new letter must be submitted at the beginning of each academic year.